

Crown College in Tacoma, WA is Re-structuring.

On July 30, 2007, Crown College was removed from the accredited list of schools with the Accrediting Commission of Career Schools and Colleges of Technology (ACCSCT).

Crown College has put in place a safeguard for the educational futures of its student body. The students are sad to leave Crown, but are excited for the new opportunities the school has set up for the completion of their degree's.

All former and current Crown College students need to recognize that this current setback will have no effect on the credits and degrees they have earned over the past 17 years.

The world of education has never been in greater turmoil than now. Crown has been caught in these times of change and has not proven to be as nimble or as well financed as the era requires. Crown College will take full advantage of this opportunity to restructure its current position and has great hope of re-entering the educational community of accredited schools in the near future with the same fire for educational advancements in online technology that it always had.
